MANY JOIN IN OBSERVANCE OF DAY FOR LABOR

Crowds From Several Cities Present at Mandan Labor Celebration

GOVERNOR IS A SPEAKER

Plea for State Administration is Made to Crowd at Fair Grounds

The Labor day celebration in Mandan Monday was a full day. From the parade in the morning to the closing events in the evening a large crowd of people from Bismarck, Mandan and Wilton celebrated in many different ways. Athletic events of various kinds, a Ford race, ball game and dance were part of the entertainment planned by the Labor day committee and a boxing match given on the fair grounds attracted a large number of people.

Governor Lynn J. Frazier, Stephen H. president of the National Federation of Labor and N. C. O'Connor, secretary of the Typographical Union of Minneapolis, were the speakers of the day. All speakers voiced the same sentiment to the crowd in saying that organized labor now is against the hardest fight in its history and members of labor were urged to make a united stand against the open shop movement which speakers said was being advocated strong in every section of the country.

Urges Fight Kept Up

Governor Frazier declared that if you don't want to put yourself and children in slavery it's up to you to get into some movement that is supporting labor and declared that the organized farmers are up against the same fight as organized labor. The same newspapers, the same financial interests are fighting him. We have proved here in North Dakota that organized labor and organized farmers can cooperate.

Referring to the political situation in the state the governor made a plea for support of the state administration in the retail fight. Other speakers brought up the political situation Mr. Frazier especially making a plea for support of the administration in the retail fight.

The governor attacked swollen fortunes as a menace to the country, declaring that the common people must pay the interest on them through generations. He declared they were a burden for many reasons including as a reason because these people have their lawyers in the United States senate to make laws. He declared that two-thirds of the members of the senate are lawyers, corporation lawyers—eleven by the people but representing the corporations who pay their campaign expenses. Corporations control Congress, he declared, and they have their judges on the bench.

The last resort of these big interests he declared referring to the judiciary is to tie up all cases and then have them decided on constitutionality.

Says Fight Worth While

The governor declared that it was a hard fight for progressives against such odds and said that he sometimes thought the average citizen did not understand the situation. He referred to the labor laws passed in this state and declared that the opposition last winter tried to recall practically every labor law that had been put on the statute books. He cited the minimum wage law, not being enforced he said because it was in court is in other cases where the position, the financial interests have taken a law into court to tie it up. He cited the various labor laws recently enacted including the eight-hour law for women, full crew law and union label law.

He told the audience that they can not expect to change and then a concert which he declared that he might like to keep up for what may come out of the future generation as well as the present.

Miners Have Delegation

A delegation of miners from the Wilton district were present for the Labor day celebration in Mandan. They came to Bismarck to see the governor and to see the fair grounds and went to Mandan in the afternoon. The delegation included the parade and the Labor day celebration in Mandan.

FLAMES FANNED BY 30-MILE WIND LASH INTO NEW FURY; WOMEN AND CHILDREN FLEE IN TERROR

All Women and Children From Solana and Whitepine Reported to Have Been Gotten Safely Out in Army Trucks or on Foot—All Available Transportation Rushed to Aid Inhabitants Fleeing From Path of Flames.

McGrath, Minn., Sept. 6.—Whitepine, a lumber settlement eight miles north of here, was destroyed early this afternoon and inhabitants of Solana village, 4 miles east of there, were forced to flee the town when a sudden 30-mile wind swept up at noon and swept forest fires north of here beyond the control of fire lines.

The condition in the Solana, Whitepine district was reported "favorable" by forestry and military officials at 11 a. m., but a half hour later the sudden wind lashed the flames into a new fury and upset hope that the fires might be under control tomorrow.

According to Miss Clara Nelson, one of the refugees who reached McGrath at 1:05 p. m., all women and children were removed from the burning village of Whitepine in army trucks. The entire town seemed to catch fire at once, she said. Nothing of value was saved from the town, the refugees starting immediately on the south road to McGrath.

SOUTH DAKOTA FARMER IN FINE CONDITION NOW

Renner Man Says He Eats Anything, And Never Felt Better In His Life

"I knew before I had finished my first bottle of Tanlac that I had found the medicine I had been needing so long," said Ole Flanoe, well-to-do farmer of Renner, S. D., while on a recent visit to Sioux Falls.

"Before I got hold of Tanlac I had been in a bad way for some time from stomach trouble. I had little appetite and nothing I ate agreed with me. I had awful, dizzy spells and palpitation of the heart, and sometimes I would gasp for breath like I was about to smother. I was so nervous I didn't get much sleep, and my back hurt me so bad I could do very little work."

"Tanlac reached my case in a short time. I eat anything I want now and never am troubled with indigestion afterwards. I sleep like a log and never feel finer in my life than I do now when I get up in the morning. I am glad to give this statement for Tanlac and wish there was some way it could reach every person who suffers like I did."

"Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere."

MUTTON AND WAYS OF PREPARING IT.

There is so little meat! There is such an unreasonable passion for activity! And so we skin the surface of things; we never look down into their depths, and see the power of help and culture which they might contain.—Philip Brooks.

MUTTON is classed with beef in nutritive value, not quite so high in protein, but higher in fat than beef. Like beef it is easily digested and usually served rare. The strong flavor of mutton may be reduced by removing the skin, and if the flavor is still objectionable, mask it with highly-seasoned sauces or vegetables.

Braised Breast of Mutton.

Line bottom of a casserole with a few slices of bacon; lay on it a breast of mutton; cover with slices of peeled lemon; add more bacon, one onion sliced, then pour on half a pint of stock and cook on the back part of the stove until the mutton is tender.

Onion Sauce.

Cut six large white onions into quarters and cook for ten minutes in boiling water; drain them; add a cupful of butter and simmer in a covered saucepan until they are very tender; press through coarse sieve and sprinkle with a tablespoonful of flour, mixing well, then add one teaspoonful of sugar and salt to season, and one-half cupful of cream. Cook until the flour is well cooked. This sauce is especially favored to serve with loin chops.

Veal With Onions.

Brown a slice of veal in an iron frying pan, cover with sliced onions, two bay leaves, four peppercorns and enough boiling water to cover. Cook slowly until the meat is tender.

Cream Horseradish Sauce.

Whip one-third of a cupful of cream until stiff; stir in three tablespoonfuls of grated horseradish root freshly prepared; add salt, cayenne to taste with one tablespoonful of vinegar. Serve with boiled leg of mutton.

Tomato Sauce.

Cook one cupful of stewed tomatoes with a stalk of celery, a sliced onion, a few cloves and salt and pepper. Cook together two tablespoonfuls each of butter with flour and add to the strained tomatoes. Cook until smooth, thick and well seasoned.

Veal With Tomato.

Take a thick slice of veal, brown in fat, cover with a layer of onions and tomato, a sliced green pepper and a little water, cook in a moderate oven until all the vegetable juices have been absorbed.

Banana Pie.

Bake a deep crust and when cool fill with sliced bananas, sprinkle with a bit of salt and lemon juice, with sugar to taste and cover with whipped cream.

NEW MODES

Spic span new, winsomly chic, Spic span new, winsomely chic,

Any shopping tour nowadays will prove a zestful affair, if in its cycle it includes the purchase of a new Frock, Suit or Coat. For the Fall displays are replete with a beauty and style far removed from anything commonplace, yet prices have a practical trend.

FROCKS---

Achieve a smart simplicity by means of their slender silhouettes, but make up for it in their method of trimming and luxurious fabrics. All the new autumnal shades are represented. Twills, Tricotine, Pique-tine and satin, are the new fabric favorites are variable as to hems also, and have strong leanings toward side closings, panels, and low shoulder lines. And if they possibly can, they make themselves up along cape lines. Fur is everywhere—especially in gray, brown and black. The materials are most luxurious.

$22.50 $125.00 $39.50 $150.00

$25.00 $125.00 $5.00 to $30.00

SUITS---

Seem bent on pleasing everyone, for styles are so varied. The woman who wants a conservative, tailored model will find it, while beautiful styles are developed in pile fabrics richly fur trimmed, with decided tendencies toward wide sleeves, irregular hems and wide panels.

A HAT---

that's the starting point of your Fall costume. When you visit our millinery display you will see a group of bewitching hats on which the designers have showed many favors. Gay and sprightly colors, eccentric bits of trimming, whimsically irregular contours, dimpled brims or slashed.

Can there now be any doubt, that here you will find a hat to strike a keynote of style and color for your autumn costume.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER

(Established 1873)

WHAT WE WOULD DO

What would the reactionaries do?

This is the question the Grand Forks Herald asks The Tribune?

First and foremost, it would not spend more than a million more to finish the state elevator and mill at Grand Forks. If necessary, it would let that monumental folly stand there to remind the people of the fallacy of state ownership. The $900,000 spent might profitably be charged off now—for when a million or two more of the people's money is invested at Grand Forks in the state owned mill and elevator, it does not take much business acumen to predict what will happen.

One mill and elevator at Grand Forks which is not even a terminal market, will have as much effect upon the grain and flour business in North Dakota, as a similar elevator located at Kalama-zoo, Mich.

Of course the pork loving propensities of the average politician dictate an immediate completion of the Grand Forks enterprise. The Non-partisan League, however, has found how hard it is to coax private capital to enlist in state owned enterprises. Probably the I. V. A. through some financial legerdemain can secure the money to finance the dream of state owned enterprises.

The Herald claims that the people are entitled to have the experiment of state owned mills and elevators made "in good faith and in an adequate manner."

Is it the belief of the Herald that one combination mill and elevator at Grand Forks can test out the operation of state owned industries "in good faith and in an adequate manner?"

Every thinking farmer and every grain man knows that the pork barrel at Grand Forks into which $900,000 has been salted away will not benefit the people of the state one penny. It will give the politicians something to play with and increase the overhead cost of government, that is all.

The Herald naively remarks:

"It believes that when the affairs of the state are placed in the hands of trustworthy men, the mill and elevator should be completed and operated, that the management of this business should be divorced entirely from political control and should be made to stand on its own feet."

It is evident that the Herald is demanding the impossible. As long as North Dakota stays in any business for profit, just so long will the enterprises get deeper into the political mire. The Grand Forks Herald knows this, but it has a big state enterprise under construction and a strong local demand that it be completed. No one can fail to sense the political expediency of the Herald's position.

The Tribune would not complete the white elephant at Grand Forks. It would get out of every business the state has dabbled in as fast as possible. It would not even invade the banking business as the I. V. A. proposes or the league has already done. It would as one great publicist has written have "no more government than is absolutely necessary to protect society, maintain individual and vested rights, and assure the free exercise of a sound conscience."

If the Grand Forks Herald calls this reactionary, why there is nothing to prevent it from advocating a continuation of state socialism, more especially when it brings political pork to Grand Forks.

REAL BOYS

Sir Ernest Shackleton is going to take two Scotch Boy Scouts with him on his coming trip to the Antarctic.

We hazard the opinion that every other Boy Scout in the world is envious of those two Scotch youngsters.

Dangers?

Of course, lots of them.

But what does a real boy care about danger?

CURRAN

Curran, who is the fusion candidate for mayor of New York against Hylan, the Tammany candidate, has just introduced himself to the country at large in a way that marks him as a man of common sense.

In his first speech as a candidate, he urged that all expenditures for war memorials be postponed until after every wounded and disabled soldier has been cared for.

An unsuspected readiness among Congressmen to recognize a man's home as his brewery as well as his castle has caused great excitement among the lobbyists of the Anti-Saloon League.

FINE FEATHERS

E. J. Heinz of Seattle sails for Laysan Island, 700 miles northwest of Honolulu. There he will salvage 40,000 tons of bird bones, for fertilizer. It's all that's left of a paradise of sea birds so numerous that 300,000 were killed in 1909 alone, for their feathers.

Women who wore the feathers probably didn't know that they could be obtained only by killing the mother birds in the nesting season.

That's how the egret or white heron was almost exterminated on our Atlantic coast, until protected by law.

PROFITS

Capital hereafter must be content with a 10 per cent return on its investment. That's what the National Hay Association is told by Walter Lichtenstein of the First National Bank, Chicago.

It's going to be a very lucky and exceptional business concern that doesn't lose 10 per cent instead of making it this year.

Congress should think that over. It has an inflated idea of taxes that can be raised from 1921 profits.

You can't get blood out of turnip.

Step harder on the economy brake!

COFFINS

Having failed to make much of an impression on the high cost of living, the U. S. Department of Justice is now going to try its hand at the high cost of dying.

Its investigators have been getting facts about the conspiracy that is said to exist among the coffin manufacturers, distributors and the undertakers of the leading cities of the country.

These facts are said to prove violations of the Sherman anti-trust law and outrageous gouging of the public.

Coffins costing $20 to manufacture are being sold by undertakers for from $300 to $400 and $30 coffins for $600.

The sum total of this ghoulish profiteering during the past few years runs into the millions.

After seven years of Government control Great Britain has returned its railroads to private hands. Two years were enough for Uncle Sam.

Congress may waste wind and the government generally may be rather inactive, but the situation compels life and movement in prohibition enforcement circles.

Henry Ford's railroad, which lost money before he bought it, has earned $500,000 in six months. Perhaps the chief trouble with the railroads is the lack of Henry Fords to manage them.

A protest is said to be expected from Great Britain in consequence of the extension of the three-mile limit in order to seize the liquor schooner Henry L. Marshall.

NO "GROUP" DELEGATION

It is announced from Washington that Mr. Harding has no intention of appointing a "labor" representative or a "woman" representative or any "group" representative as such on the American delegation to the Washington Conference. That he couldn't and wouldn't make such appointments was elemental. The wonder is that anybody should ask or expect that he would. The delegation will represent the United States, one and indivisible, the whole people and not any one "class" or sex. It is a curious irony of "progress" that altogether too many people in the United States have revived and extended and applied under new names the division of a people into separate social and economic entities that the French Revolution was supposed to have abolished.

In spite of our formal popular representative Government there exists, constantly in effort, and too often in fact, a government by classes or estates. There is the Organized Labor Estate. There is the Farmers' Estate, manifesting itself so powerfully in the present Congress. Some women are pining for the Women's Estate; and so on. Special exemptions and privileges are sought and sometimes obtained by statute by the Farmers' Estate and the Organized Labor Estate. Then we have what may be called the Anti-Saloon League Estate, almost a branch of the Government, gayly overriding the Bill of Rights. There used to be an American people, equal under universal suffrage, animated with a national consciousness. That hateful exotic "class consciousness" is trying to supplant it. "Group" representation, "group" parties, "group" government have made their appearance, have developed a certain strength, which, if not resisted and overcome, will contain dangerous potentialities of evil.

They will be overcome if government of the people, for the people, by the people, is not to perish from the earth. Mr. Harding has given a useful, if rudimentary, lesson to the advocates of these selfish and disintegrating theories. The American delegates to the conference will be selected for their qualifications, not for their membership of a "group."—New York Times.

IT'S NOT THE FIRST COST, IT'S THE UPKEEP

RECALL CAULDRON

By The Pot Boiler

The Minot Daily news has this comment to make upon the I. V. A. platform. It sums up the situation succinctly from the standpoint of the modified socialists:

R. Nestos has reiterated his determination, if elected, to endeavor to secure the completion and placing in operation of the state mill and elevator at Grand Forks. Mr. Nestos pledged himself to this course following his unanimous nomination at the Devils Lake convention. His attitude is that a large proportion of North Dakota citizens want to see a state-owned proposition of the kind carried out on a really large scale in order to demonstrate to the satisfaction of intelligent citizens the practicability of the reverse of a state-owned business enterprise. Whether the experiment is successful or not is another matter. No administration can guarantee success. The best it can do is make an honest effort. That Mr. Nestos is pledged to do. His program offers a far better hope to the friends of the mill enterprise than the present state regime. The Frazier administration is bankrupt and discredited. Work on the state plant has been suspended for months, and there is no prospect of resuming it under the present alignment.

A part of the program of Mr. Nestos and the independents is the raising of a new bonded fund to clear up debts and pull the state out of the financial hole in which it has been mired for so long. This program would mean early resumption of work on the Grand Forks plant and a speedy trial of the experiment. Thinking North Dakotans, even of the Nonpartisan league, who want the plant completed realize that Mr. Nestos offers by far the best prospect of seeing the desired end accomplished and will vote for him and his ticket for that reason.

It is a questionable piece of state financing to bond the state to pay up the losses incurred by the org in state ownership. Why assess future generations for the errors of the present? In admitting that a bond issue is necessary to liquidate the program of the New Day, the I. V. A. practically concedes the impossibility of state ownership of public utilities for profit.

The honest thing to do if the I. V. A. win is to cut down the budget for state purposes to the bone. Salvage as much of the assets of state owned utilities as is possible and then put what obligations are of pressing moment in the general tax budget. Not all must or can be paid at once. The losses could be absorbed gradually through the general tax budget by the practice of strict economy in all departments of state government.

The I. V. A. program presents a paradox that is quite anomalous in political annals. It proposes to bond several millions to continue the league program within restricted limits to demonstrate to the people of the state the soundness or the fallacy of state ownership of mills, elevators and banks. In the same breath it proposes to bond for another amount to meet the losses of those same enterprises under league management. Why charge any more off to experiment and experience? Is not the bill large enough now? What purpose can be served by putting a bond burden on the people to absorb the losses and then slapping on top of it another bond issue to continue the losing ventures? What guarantee have we that I. V. A. political management of the industries is going to be less political and more business like than the league's? Does history show that political control of public ownership enterprises varies much in the net results.

Which all brings us to the story in the negro south of the Mason and Dixon line who regularly sold his vote as many times as there were factions.

"Well Sambo," asked a friend, "how much did you get for your vote?"

"One ole boss paid me $2 and an other done gave me $1."

"Of course you voted for the boss who gave you $200," answered his friend.

that is political. "Ernie," did not

"Bill" Lemke and John Hagan shoot these crumbs over to the Tribune and help the Pot Boiler.

Of course, Mr. Peterson, the Pot Boiler realizes that you have been down in Miami near Job Brinton's sisal farm where "townier's crocodiles make faces at 'Jolt's and Marse Jim's crocodiles," and consequently you are not in close contact with the facts. It is too much to expect that you be informed. But come to Bismarck and look up the records of the state printing commission and see where the crumbs are going. Maybe you could pick up a crust or two. Probably Gov. Frazier will start that state printing school you recently petitioned for. Maybe Brother Thorson will give you some of the league crumbs that have gone into his perfectly loyal I. V. A. institution. You never can tell, Ernie?

The Dickinson Press has this reference to make which in view of the facts of the case, that paper is still yielding to its political disappointments:

"The policy of the Tribune has been to ride the fence despite its editor's weak assertions to the contrary. It has pretended to be a paper that was opposed to the league and yet it has stood hard by to pick the crumbs from off the political table of the league and in an effort to secure a mortgage on the state printing. If the editor of that sheet has ever felt bitterly toward the league he has never shown it. In fact, when other independent papers were carrying the facts regarding the condition of the state's industries to the people during the last session of the legislature, the Tribune was almost as talkative as a clam. The same characteristic has prevailed in the handling of practically every issue of a political nature that has ever come before the people.

"Pot Boiler" goes ever farther. In addition to censuring the Press for its criticism of his attitude, he endeavors to outline the policies he would have us follow. But who is the "Pot Boiler"? Why the mystery? While in Mandan the other day the editor made a vain attempt to uncover his identity. In fact, one in close touch with the business and editorial end of the Tribune gave out the delightful information that the identity of the Pot

Boiler was a secret. But why the mystery? Is he a member of the Pot Boiler may be George Mann, editor of the Tribune or he may be H. G. Padden or perhaps William Lemke. It was in the sentiments and ideas expressed in the column savor so strongly. He that as it may. He has shown his hand in the recall campaign as clearly as if he had laid his cards on the table and he is found aligned with the peanut politicians of the state instead of the people whom the paper serves. We care not who he is, he stands self convicted in the eyes of his subscribers. He has sacrificed all right to consideration. He is caught and from an editorial standpoint, the Press is through with the Tribune. In the future we shall shun it as we avoid a source of pestilence and treat it with the same contempt that we do for the Courier-News. The Republic and the Bismarck Tribune and others are mislead by the Pot Boiler, will find himself more exposed and rejected than ever after the coming election."

In conclusion, the Pot Boiler desires to refer to a very interesting decision by the New York court of appeals in ruling that the payment of a soldiers' bonus is unconstitutional. While the court recognizes that the relief of the defenders of the Republic is most praiseworthy, the broad principle of pledging the public credit for the benefit of a certain class is involved and the court has the following to say which might be read with profit by both Nonpartisan League and I. V. A. adherents:

"Great expenditures may be lightly authorized, if payment is postponed. To place the burden on our children is easy. Nor do we scrutinize so closely the expenditures to be made if that is done. The pressure which will come when the obligation matures is ignored.

"Conscious of this human weakness, to guard against public bankruptcy, the people thought it wise to limit the legislative power. The courts must see to it that their intentions are not frustrated or evaded. And this is true even if the action questioned seems to be approved by the voters."

Unfortunately North Dakota has no such constitutional safeguards as New York. The sky practically is the limit. But consistency, cool heads, abolition of personal invective and the rule of reason will some day assert itself in this state. A leader will one day rise up strong and big enough to ignore class or group consciousness and come out for a program of governmental action that will make for a government of the people for the people and by the people. But cheap political expedients merely aggravate the disease.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

After Sprinkle-Blow had gone, Nancy hunted up the brass-polish and silver-polish and floor-polish and window-polish and set to work shining up the fairyman's house. Nick beat rugs and moved furniture and did chores of all sorts, and soon the place shone like Aladdin's lamp. Wouldn't Sprinkle-Blow be surprised though, when he returned from his vacation to find everything so spick and span, without any trouble to himself at all?

Everything was done at last and Nancy, arms akimbo, surveyed their work with pride. Now, what'll we do, Nick? she asked, smothering down her apron. "What else can we clean?"

Just then her eye fell on the key to the house of the Nutcracker Fairies hanging on the nail in the wall where Sprinkle-Blow had left it, and an idea popped into her head. She had forgotten what the fairyman had said about not touching it. "Oh, Nickie, let's clean house for the Nutcracker Fairies, too, poor things," she cried.

Don't suppose that anybody does anything at all for them and I'm sure they'd like to be scrubbed up."

Nick thought it a good idea. "But," said he, "how can we get in without opening the door and if we open the door they'll all get out at once and if they all get out at once, the earth will have forty kinds of weather. Then what would Mr. Sprinkle-Blow say?"

Nancy was thoughtful. "I'll tell you," she answered slowly. "We'll ask our Magic Shoes to make us little enough to crawl through the key-hole. That's easy enough."

"But then we can't take the polish as alone," declared Nick. "No, that's too bad."

Then said Nancy firmly, "We'll just have to use the key, and be quick about it."

MISERY ON ALL SIDES

Typhus Appears and Water and Soap is Lacking with Which to Fight it

Syzran, Russia, Sept. 6. (By the Associated Press.)—There was a time when Syzran was the most powerful city along the Volga but that time is gone. Today it is crowded with dust-begrimed peasants who group themselves in gray masses in their search for food. Even the laughter of the children has been silent in the despair that has settled over the tens of thousands who sit cowering themselves and waiting for what seems to be the inevitable.

Pictures of misery seen here are displayed in every other city in the famine-stricken valley of the Volga. Many professional beggars of the gypsy type are to be found here and in other large centers in southeastern Russia but the starving farmers ask no alms and utter no cries. They stand silent and await their fate.

Markets Spring Up.

Markets have sprung up mushroom-like about the refugee camp offering for sale vegetables, bread, flour and meat. They are surrounded by hungry people who have no money, but who exchange wedding rings, fur coats, books and other small possessions. They know the Russian winter is coming and that it will find them without shelter and clothing, but they are obliged to give up the necessities of the future to meet the demands of the present.

FRANK NORTH, "WHITE CHIEF OF THE PAWNEES"

Only once in history did Indians succeed in wrecking one of the "white man's" iron horses, and this occurred in 1867 when a band of Cheyennes dived a freight train on the Union Pacific near Plum Creek, Neb. A strange scene followed. Among the loot which the savages took from the wrecked cars were hundreds of bolts of calico. In a sportive mood, the young warriors tied the ends of the calico to their ponies' tails. Then they went cavorting over the prairie, the long waves of many-colored cloth billowing and floating behind them.

While the Cheyennes were still enjoying this sport, from the surrounding hills dashed a band of mounted Indians led by a white man of soldierly bearing. When the Cheyennes saw him charging down upon them, they fled in every direction, crying "The White Chief of the Pawnees! The White Chief of the Pawnees!"

Maj. Frank North was the "White Chief of the Pawnees." He had lived among them and they loved him. They adopted him into the tribe, calling him Pawnee La Sharo. This meant "great chief of the Pawnees" and chief even of the Pawnee chiefs. No other Pawnee and only one white man, Gen. John C. Fremont, ever held that title. Major North enlisted his first Pawnee scouts in 1864, and in every war on the plains thereafter they did valiant service.

The scouts were issued regulation blue uniforms, but they had their own ideas about how to wear them. A full dress parade was an amusing sight. Some wore only the trousers and were bareheaded; others wore the big black hat, but had a breech cloth in place of trousers; and others cut out the seat of the pantaloons, leaving only leggings. All wore spurs, whether they had on boots, moccasins or were barefoot. But they were good fighters for all that.

They were with General Carr at the Battle of Summit Springs, Colo., in 1880, and here Major North killed the Sioux chief Tall Bull, although Buffalo Bill is sometimes credited with that feat.

During his scout career Major North became a close friend of Buffalo Bill, and when he disbanded his scouts, Cody and North went into the cattle business in Nebraska together, and were partners for many years.

Play was still on today in the tennis tournament. Thirty out-of-town players were entered in the matches. Bismarck players had the best of the matches with the Dickinson golfers, the visitors finding the local course very difficult during a high wind. Jack Hintgen and E. B. Cox defeated William and Louis Kosteletzky in a best ball foursome, 18 holes, by 3 points. Judge Birdzell and A. S. Bolster played Hunter and Dr. Herbert and halved the match, 11-2 to 11-2. Anthony Kosteletzky and Erdahl, of Dickinson, were defeated by Haines and Nichols, three up. Stackhouse and Goddard defeated Heaton and Klinefelter 3 up.

Take It In Time!

DO you know that by far the larger number of the common ailments of women are not surgical ones; that is they are not caused by any serious displacement, tumor, growth, or other marked change?

DO you know that these common ailments produce symptoms that are very much like those caused by the more serious surgical conditions?

DO you know that many women and young girls suffer needlessly from such ailments? More than that, they endanger their health by allowing their ailments to continue and develop into something serious.

If treated early, that is, within a reasonable time after the first warning symptoms appear, serious conditions may often be averted. Therefore, at the first appearance of such symptoms as periodic pains, irregularities, irritability and nervousness, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken. It is prepared with accuracy and cleanliness from medicinal plants. It contains no narcotics nor poisonous drugs, and can be taken with perfect safety.

The Vegetable Compound acts on the conditions which bring about these symptoms in a gentle and efficient manner. The persistent use of it shows itself in the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms. In a word, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts as a natural restorative, relieving the present distress and preventing more serious trouble.
